

New Business Funders Provides the Solution to Entrepreneurs Start Up Capital Challenge

September 19, 2016

SCOTTSDALE, AZ / ACCESSWIRE / September 19, 2016 / A unique funding platform for start-up businesses has launched in Scottsdale Arizona called New Business Funders. The company has successfully emerged from its beta stage of development and proven its business model to be repeatable. New Business Funders has recently taken office space in the premium Gainey Ranch Financial Center in Scottsdale to scale its growth.

CEO of the company, Troy Bohlke, states that the small business owner to a great extent carries the US economy. "When I learned that up to 20,000 people per day start a business in America, I was blown away. Over 5M people per year start a business and virtually no one is helping these people get capital. It is my belief that this market is one the most underserved markets in existence. So we decided to get in the business of helping small business get their small businesses funding."

The bleak truth, according to a January 16th, 2015 article in Forbes, is that about 90% of start-ups fail. These business might have been a roaring success had they had access to funding at start-up and/or during rapid growth stages. Often times, businesses grow too fast and that growth is not sustainable unless the small business owner has access to funding to facilitate its growth. Small Business Owners have a difficult time acquiring funding because the traditional US banking community does not commonly provide small businesses, particularly start-ups, with the capital they need.

If a small business is fortunate enough to receive a bank or SBA loan it is because their business has demonstrated performance in sales, provided tax returns, has excellent credit, and supplied collateral, as well as a consistency in business bank statement balances.

According to Bohlke, "Our mission is to provide access to funding solutions by matching the right capital without the common roadblocks. Our programs do not require collateral, bank statements or tax returns. However, we do require good FICO score of 700 or better. The New Business Funders program differs from traditional programs because it matches the Entrepreneur through a unique software platform with 0% interest Business Credit Lines for the first 6-12 months allowing the start-up business to begin building business credit. Once approved, generally our clients will have funding in 15-21 business days."

The company is now launching a series of educational videos and blogs to educate start up business about the value of revolving credit and how to develop business and personal credit as well as how to avoid the pitfalls most commonly experienced in the first 12 months of opening a business.
